Drilling Starts on N. B. Phelps Well at Addison Tuesday

John T. Cunningham Company began actual work on new Oriskany sand test at edge of this village — Drillers find old hole of 2,000 feet depth in good shape to begin work — Gas men thick around Addison.

Drilling started in the Phelps well Tuesday and three crews are now keeping the rig going day and night towards the Oriskany sand. John T. Cunningham, president of the company bearing his name, was here yesterday and stated he firmly believes the Addison well has an excellent chance of becoming a producer.

Work of rigging up the Phelps was completed the first of the week and drillers immediately started bailing out the several hundred feet of water which had seeped into the hole. This work was completed Tuesday when it was found that only a few feet of sediment had caved into the bottom of the hole. Drilling started Tuesday afternoon but the well was shut down until eight o'clock this morning until extra men came to Addison to start running the rig on a three-tower schedule. After some 50 feet had been drilled the work was interrupted long enough to put a new cracker between the string of tools and the steel cable.

Since it was announced the Cunningham Company would drill the Phelps to the Oriskany there has been feverish activity among gas producers at this place. Representatives of most of the well known operators have been in the field picking up what acreage they could on the Addison structure, while a number of independent leasers known to operators by the uncomplimentary title of "lease hounds" have been endeavoring to pick up stray bits of land to peddle to gas people. In addition to these strangers a number of scouts employed by drilling companies are drifting in and out of Addison every day to keep a check on the progress of the Phelps.

One man the visitor to the well is almost sure to find on the job, no matter what crew of men are working is "Brady" Phelps. Mr. Phelps' genial face is seldom away from the rig, save at meal time and the short hours he seems to need for sleep. "Brady" was caught in an unguarded moment yesterday by one of the Cunningham force and declared that if gas is struck in his well he will set up a fried chicken dinner for all hands concerned when she blows in.

State's Oldest Car is Wanted

Albany, Aug. 26—In addition to his regular duties as State Motor Vehicle Commissioner, Charles A. Harnett today found himself saddled with responsibility of unearthing New York State's oldest automobile.

The car, Commissioner Harnett pointed out, would be used for exhibition purposes in connection with the Annual Automobile Show to be held in New York City this coming November.

On display with the latest stream-lined creations of leading automotive engineers, the aged vehicle would demonstrate to the public the rapid strides which have been made in car construction during the past several years.

Despite the interesting comparison the display would offer, the problem confronting the Commissioner remained a puzzling one. How, he queried, would one track down the oldest car in the state? As employees will testify, the Motor Vehicle Bureau is a pretty busy place and no time is allotted the Commissioner to scour the countryside in search of an automobile . . . even an antique.

Today, however, the Commissioner feels that he has solved his problem. By informing the newspapers of his dilemma, he feels confident that the owner of the oldest car in the state will see by the papers that his car is wanted and wanted badly. All this person has to do, Commissioner Harnett explained, is to write to the Motor Vehicle Information Secretary, Bureau of Motor Vehicles, State Office Bulding, Albany, N. Y., stating the age of his automobile.

The search for the oldest car in New York State is on.

Three Milk Men Oppose Fourth In Addison

Charles Phillips, Goodhue, has filed an application with the State Agriculture Department to peddle Grade A, raw milk in Addison and vicinity. A public hearing on the request was held before a representative of the Agricultural Commissioner in Buffalo Thursday.

Homer Reynolds, George Dininny and Edgar Dann, three local distributors, appeared in Buffalo before the Board protesting against the issuing of the permit. They were represented by Attorney Hugh Varn.

Dr. William E. Barron, local health officer, also appeared before the Board. He stated Mr. Phillips' dairy complied with all local health ordinances and the $25 had been filed for the state license.

It was brought out at the hearing that price regulation is no longer prevalent in the state on retail milk and according to plans, Mr. Phillips hopes to retail milk under the prevailing price of the three local distributors. A decision from the commissioner is expected in a few days.

Oil Gusher Spouts Riches At Bradford

The first gusher oil well struck in the Bradford fields for more than twenty years spouted precious black fluid into the air yesterday. For a time some 100 barrels of oil an hour was shot as high as the derrick, the crew laboring 14 hours to harness the well. State troopers guarded the spot holding spectators at bay until workmen finally turned the oil into a pipe line.

It was estimated that twelve to fourteen hundred barrels of oil gushed from the hole before the flow was brought under control. The oil was struck in the second sand, some 1,629 feet deep.

Third Well Drilled to Sand This Morning

Drillers, operators, farmers and all people in the vicinity of Woodhull were turning anxious eyes towards the Ackerman well last night as Joe Flanagan prepared to drill it into the Oriskany sand. Mr. Wingart, veteran driller for Flanagan, stated the well couldn't miss as the structure was fully a foot higher than in the big Earl Calkins.

The Ackerman was cased last week and cemented Tuesday. Wednesday the water was baled out of the hole and preparations were made to drill through some 28 feet of Onondaga lime early Thursday morning into the sand.

Speculation has been rife concerning the prospects of the Ackerman. Its height on the structure indicated the well should prove a producer, but the dry Fenner Taft well stands only a short distance east, and the sand was too hard in the Taft to hold gas making the Ackerman more of a gamble.

The next well expected to reach the sand is Becker's Carrie B. Calkins now down more than 3,000 feet. As the Carrie B. Calkins is midway between the Herrington discovery well and Lycoming's producer the former can hardly miss.

Difficulty with water in the Moyer well forced Dick Atwater to run a string of 6⅝-inch casing this week. This well is nearly to the Tully lime and will be the next to come in after the Calkins.

Crafty Chinese generals thwarted the attempt of the Japs to land 42,000 additional troops yesterday by planting land mines and building secret machine gun nests. Woodhull Fire Boys Arrested— One Confined Cyrus Miles, aged 14 has been placed in a state institution following a mental examination and a younger brother Hugh, placed under parole of Chief of Police Elmer Bovee of Addison after the investigation of a series of fires in the Tucker School District. The boys were apprehended by Chief Bovee Wednesday evening after he had been called here to investigate the fire which burned the barn on the Martin Towsley farm across the road from the school house which burned on July 24. The boys were taken to Cohocton Thursday in the company of their father, H. J. Miles and Chief Bovee for a hearing before Judge Edwin S. Brown in Children's Court. Judge Brown placed the boys in the parole of Chief Bovee for a year.

Both boys admitted after an hours questioning that they set the fires because they wished to attend the Woodhull High School this fall. Later it has been learned that Hugh was compelled to assist his brother in the acts much against his wishes.

Late Friday night Chief Bovee was called to the Miles home where he uncovered evidence that the older boy was contemplating more fires and it was decided to have a mental examination. After the examination Saturday, it was decided to give him institutional care. The parents consenting, Chief Bovee accompanied the boy to a state institution.

Cameron Old Home Day Attracts Over 600 Visitors

Rain interrupts but does not halt program—Festivities begin with parade—32 Communities represented in registration — Assemblyman Chauncey Hammond is speaker—Attorney Crane master-of-ceremonies.

The Cameron Old Home Day celebration is now a memory for another year. The fourth annual get-to-gether of the towns-people and former residents of Cameron, friends and families was held Saturday afternoon and in spite of rain, proved to be the most successful in the series, according to C. J. Wilder, president of the group sponsoring the affair.

Assemblyman Chauncey Hammond, Chemung County, an inveterate story teller and entertainer as well as a capable speaker told some of his stories in his inimitable way. The topic of his talk was confusion in modern times. Mr. Hammond is assistant division passenger agent for the Erie Railroad.

P. M. Donellon, Erie superintendent of the Allegany, Meadville and Bradford Division at Salamanca, who was born in Cameron, spoke on "The Importance of Railroads to the Rural Communities Today".

Attorney Charles L. Crane, president of the Steuben County Bar Association, presided as master-of-ceremonies. Music was provided during the program by the Canisteo Valley Concert Band under the baton of Eldon Seamans.

Attorney Crane had just introduced Mr. Wilder as president of the affair when it started to rain and as many as could sought shelter in the Methodist Church where the festivities were completed.

A parade preceded the speaking program with prizes being awarded to Phillip Dartt, leading a pony with an Indian travois with an Indian papoose aboard. Second and third prizes were awarded to C. E. Margeson and the Ladies Aid of Cameron.

The Stewart Quartet of Canisteo presented several vocal selections during the afternoon.

Prize for the oldest woman went to Mrs. Frank Quick, 78 of Campbell and to Adelbert Houghtaling, 94, for being the oldest man present. Capt. James Brady, 91, a Civil War Veteran of Bath, and a former resident, was awarded a cane as being the last survivor of the Civil War in Cameron.

After the speaking program an exhibition of horseshoe pitching was given by Bob Brown, Andover, state champion last year. This program was followed by dinner served by the ladies for those who had not provided a picnic luncheon. The Canisteo Valley Concert Band then played a concert of music from the composition of Harold Bennett. An informal program of dancing was the last event on the day's program.

Others in charge of activities were: vice president, M. D. French; secretary, Mrs. Beldon Watson; chairman of the parade committee, T. E. Dartt; chairman of the sports program, D. W. Scribner; publicity, the Rev. Crane; arrangements, Amos Sherer and parade marshal, Floyd Jackson.

The Rev. Crane extended the official welcome of the villagers to the affair.

ADDISON HAS IT

The people of Addison have again demonstrated that they have IT. IT in this case is the ability to rise to a needed emergency and put over a truly urgent community program, and the program this time was that of securing funds for an inhalator, sometimes called a pulmotor to restore suspended life through application of oxygen.

Even in Addison there has seldom if ever been such a ready public response to a call for cooperation in a worthy cause. A group of ladies were called together one afternoon and the need for apparatus to assist in resuscitation of drowning persons was discussed. It was decided to do something and as a first move an ice cream social was planned for an evening a few days later. Tickets were printed and placed in the hands of interested persons. The day of the event arrived, and with it torrents of rain which threatened to frighten away scores who might otherwise attend. Towards evening the clouds separated, but still hung poised as if ready to fling new torrents upon any who ventured to expose themselves upon the Farnham lawn. Yet the people came, at first by twos and threes, later by dozens that filled and refilled the tables spread upon the greensward. The clouds parted more widely, the crowds came thicker, the money and tickets rolled in and the ice cream rolled down as those most interested rubbed their eyes almost unable to believe that a near miracle had happened.

When the signs of the ice cream battle had been cleared away, the last ticket reported for and the money counted it was discovered the affair had made $150 towards the inhalator. But that was [illegible] happened in the [illegible] the drive for funds. It was discovered that nearly 25 years ago a local civic society had started raising funds for community betterment and had become inactive not only solvent, but possessed of a neat little sum of invested cash. The original nestegg had grown through the years when no need seemed to warrant withdrawing the funds. A meeting of the custodians of this fund was held and promptly it was decided to take enough civic society funds to finish paying for the inhalator. Again the need and again the response.

So the rain started, and the rain ceased falling; the clouds gathered and the clouds disappeared, and out of the clear sky which followed the summer's reign of water accidents came a better spirit of community understanding which swept harmony through every social level of the village and the larger community of farms and villages surrounding.

Again the people of Addison demonstrated that in a case of emergency they have the IT needed to carry through a program of civic improvement. Surely a community which can thus demonstrate its unity should be spurred to other, more ambitious programs of advancement.

ILL-BRED ACTIONS

A few days ago John Roosevelt, twenty-one-year-old son of the President, shocked everyone of intelligence in France and America by one of the most ill-bred shows of conduct at Cannes, France. Young Roosevelt, according to press reports of the incident, was attending a fete called the battle of flowers. As he and an American companion drove up to the main buildings in a horse-drawn vehicle the mayor of the city rushed out to greet the son of the President, when the latter seized a bottle of champagne out of a box in the gig and squirted the sizzling liquid in the Frenchman's face. Then grabbing the bouquet of flowers the mayor had been about to tender him young Roosevelt is said to have hit the former over the head with it.

Later from a hotel room the scion of America's so-called "first family" denied that he had committed the escapade, laying the miserable affair upon some other American. But the French mayor was certain of his statement that no mistake had been made as to the identity of the champagne attacker. And the following day the President reached out for headlines to down the incident by delivering a speech accusing Americans who oppose his New Deal program of being tories.

It is said that during the administration of Andrew Jackson there was a motley horde of low-brows who used to infest the White House and show their breeding by trampling muddy boots over upholstered furniture. We now have a reversal of that condition, for not the common, ill-bred folks but the aristocratic ill-bred folks are marching across the front pages of Washington to show just what kind of smart alecks they can be. The wife of the President who writes fluently for the magazines with advice to other people has certainly not shown the greatest judgment in bringing up her own family. After the administration succeeded in its promise to bring booze back to the nation Mrs. Roosevelt gave a radio broadcast in which she advised girls not to drink to excess, but to know how to handle what they drink.

Evidently Mrs. Roosevelt did not get the idea across properly to her son John, as to what correct behavior is in polite circles. The parade of the Roosevelt escapades marches on—sons getting divorces — daughter getting divorces and quickly marrying the man who courted her on her father's campaign trip — sons smashing cameras—sons in traffic violations and finally a son squirting champagne in the face of a French mayor.

While the family has given lip service to great ideals of uplifting the common man the family example has been enough to shatter the moral conduct of the next generation.

CAMPAIGN BOOKS

The news commentator, David Lawrence, in a recent article points out that the "Teapot Dome scandal" of the Roosevelt administration smoulders, yet nothing is done to investigate the "racket" whereby many corporations were shaken down and forced to pay tribute to the Democratic National Committee in violation of the corrupt practices act.

This shining chapter in the history of the New Deal is one vast paradox to the tenets preached by Roosevelt and the pledges made to protect the people from exploitation by the strong. The Democrats were deeply in debt for the last campaign. Business men harried on every hand by the New Dealers who sought favor by hurling epithets against industry, had not fallen over themselves to contribute to the party in power. Something had to be done to pay off that debt and the debt owed one of the DuPonts for financial aid in the preceding campaign. Then some New Dealer had a bright idea, no one has said whether it was Cohen, Corcoran, Jim Farley or some lesser light in the coterie of brilliants that surround the White House throne.

Anyway a book was published of which the only claim to fame seemed to be it contained a sheet autographed by the President. The books were sold at fabulous prices to corporations and many an official was put on the spot who wished to hedge from being taken in by this racket. The head of one firm later testified in a Congressional investigation that he paid several thousand dollars for some of the books and that he "would have taken soap wrappers, if they'd offered them".

Mr. Lawrence has this to say about the scandal which the New Dealers are trying to hush up because it affects the official family of the President of the United States:

"This is a situation which calls for a 'real liberal', someone of the rugged virtue of the late Senator Robert M. LaFollette of Wisconsin, or the probity of the late Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana.

"The scandal over the sale of campaign books to corporations would not in itself be so striking were it not for the atmosphere under the New Deal in Washington, which at times fairly reeks with political corruption. The political lawyers still ply their trade, and plenty of 'fixing' still goes on from day to day among those with political 'pull'. All this is merely a confirmation of what some of us have felt from the beginning, namely that the New Deal on the outer surface has a veneer of progressivism and liberalism, but underneath has a thick layer of political selfishness, political greed and political graft.

"In an administration which does not hesitate to get votes on Capitol Hill by promising congressmen patronage, and in an administration, too, where even an appointment to the high office of associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States is used to reward a faithful party lieutenant in the United States Senate, it is perhaps not surprising that an inquiry into the violation of the corrupt practices law by corporations should be omitted. It might be well to recall that President Coolidge, when the Teapot Dome scandal broke, appointed two attorneys—a Republican and a Democrat—as special prosecutors and took the matter entirely out of the Department of Justice and politics so that the public would be assured of a fair prosecution.

"It will be said that there is a difference between the Teapot Dome scandal and the one that has now developed under the Roosevelt administration. In the former, oil resources in the west were temporarily given away, but subsequently recovered, and a cabinet officer, who was bribed by an oil man, was brought to trial and convicted. The whole episode involved the simple principle of cabinet officer's honesty in public office.

"The new scandal, however, is much more far-reaching. It involves good faith toward enforcement of the federal statutes. It involves the whole Democratic national campaign and involves collection of funds used to pay debts incurred in electing a president of the United States to office. It involves the use of duress in forcing corporations, under threat of reprisals, to contribute to a campaign fund. It involves the very integrity of democratic government.

He Saved Money — But!

Some years ago the Pulitzer Prize award for the best cartoon of the year went to John T. McCutcheon. The cartoon showed a sad and shabby man seated upon a park bench. A squirrel playing in front of him asked: "Why didn't you save your money?" The dereliet replied, "I did!"

The President and the Budget

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

THE [illegible]ness of intention in the President's desire to balance the budget need be doubted by no one. If anything, he has been more cautious in his promises than in his purposes. He is not seriously concerned with the present size of the national debt, despite the fact that it is expected this week to pass $37,000,000,000 and reach the highest peak in American history. He believes that a nation the size of ours, with its national income, can easily carry such a debt, and whatever American economists may think, it is significant that most foreign economists, who watch and study the American situation, agree with him.

It is obvious, however, that the continuation of an unbalanced budget in the midst of mounting recovery represents a real menace. It has inflationary tendencies of a serious sort. There has never been, in my belief, any reason to fear a currency inflation, but there is certainly reason to fear a too-extensive credit inflation, if we continue to have an unbalanced budget with production going full tilt.

The President, we are told, is bringing energetic pressure on the department heads to keep below their budget estimates. He has locked up $400,000,000 of department budget funds in reserve accounts and will refuse to release them except with the approval of the Bureau of the Budget. And he can be counted on to frown upon further emergency expenditures. His attitude is a reason for optimism, and it is further supported by the fact that gold deliveries to this country appear to be decreasing, and that long-term bond issues and income from social security funds are beginning to replace the short-term bank loans. Just the same, the current deficit is more than half what the deficit for the whole year—ending next July 1—was estimated to be. Spring tax collections may take a powerful leap, but they will certainly have to, if we are to come out anywhere near even.

It is unfortunate that Administration leaders have not devoted more of their talent for publicity to educating the public to the real implications of the elastic budget.

In contradiction to the theory that the budget of a nation is like that of a household, which has to be balanced annually, the present Administration has gone on the thesis that it resembles, rather, the budget of a great industry, which must balance, not annually, but over the business cycle. In times of depression, when private investment becomes cautious, or nearly stops altogether, it is the business of government to start the cycle upward again, by spending its money, and it is justified in radically unbalancing the budget if necessary, in order to do so. There are many economists who believe that with sufficient budgetary elasticity, the peaks and valleys of depressions can be ironed out, and such depressions as the recent one prevented altogether, by automatic government action, taken much more expeditiously than was the last. If, for instance, indexes show that unemployment has passed a point which may be considered as normal —transitional unemployment, of men passing from one job to another — the government should immediately, they think, begin starting public works, which have been planned carefully in advance, and kept on the program for just such emergencies. Thus, wholesale slumps can be prevented.

But no economist believes that a national budget can indefinitely be kept out of balance without catastrophe. When private production and national income have begun to approximate normal, the government budget must be contracted, and reserves must be laid up against the next deflationary period. This is the logic of an elastic budget, and the people have not been educated to the theory. On the contrary, legislatures are inclined to think that if income is expanding the government ought to be able to expand its expenditures, too. If we could afford billions when the nation was poor, why not even more when the nation is rich? This was, however, the logic of private capital in 1929—the logic of Mr. Mellon, that there was no top to the boom. Experience educated the American public to the fallacy of that theory applied to private investment and expansion, but it hasn't educated it yet to recognize the same fallacy in public investment, expansion and spending.

Furthermore, certain indexes which are essential to our knowledge of where we really stand have been knocked out by the relief policy. Normally, the amount of unemployment is a fairly reliable index to the general economic situation of the country. But our unemployment figures are totally unreliable, because the policy of the relief administration has been to define unemployment as a certain inadequacy in income, so that undoubtedly tens of thousands are counted as unemployed who never were employed, and are social cases, useless for measuring the extent of recovery. Unemployment insurance, once it is in operation, will furnish a fairly reliable and automatic index—but we have got to do something meanwhile.

And, meanwhile, there is no letup in the pressure from groups of all kinds, who have been encouraged to believe that a providential government will augment their incomes by one form of subsidy or another

Within the last few days the cotton farmers, who already are receiving several sorts of government subsidies—for soil conservation, and by the extension for another year of 3½ per cent interest rates—have asked and demanded a loan for the purpose of holding and increasing the price of cotton, in the face of this year's extraordinary crop. But it is by no means established that the loan is necessary. If growers should receive the present prices for the current crop their gross income would be equal to last year's, which was considered satisfactory.

CIO Moves to Control Jobs of Entire Families

By MARK SULLIVAN

The sheer quantity of the innovations inspired by the Roosevelt administration, directly and indirectly, is such that no one person can keep track of them. Hardly any newspaper or other organization is able to follow all of them—certainly I know of no organization that does it or even attempts it. It is doubtful if the New Dealers themselves keep track of all their innovations.

The technique of what General Hugh Johnson calls the "Machiavellis" has been to launch a large number of policies, ideas and mechanisms, and then trust to the innovations expanding by forces within themselves. The Machiavellis are familiar with the strategy by which revolution has been brought about in some other countries. They know what is known by few others, namely, that the innovations they launch have a kind of snowball quality by which, once under way, they grow automatically. Like yeast, or like some forms of vegetation, they grow and reproduce themselves and spread throughout the country.

Even that part of the movement which consists of legislation at Washington is not fully understood by more than a few. It is probable President Roosevelt does not have complete understanding of all the innovations he sets under way. No one person could possibly have, especially a person as busy as the President. Measures written by New Deal satellites have been passed by Congress without Congress knowing what they were enacting. (Though there is less of this now than there was three or four years ago—Congress has become suspicious.) There are stories, and they are quite credible, that Mr. Roosevelt has signed measures without reading them.

Even less understood is the present status of governmental and social mechanisms and policies which have been set in motion and left to grow. Beyond, and greater in number than the new mechanism and policies lodged at Washington, are those spread out through the country. If it were possible to make a checkup and summary of the present status of the innovations in the aggregate, the country would be startled to realize the progress that has been made toward a changed form of society.

In Hazleton, Pa., C. I. O. has been trying to organize silk workers in the plant of the Duplan Silk Corporation. About the facts my information consists only of formal statements of both sides published in a Hazleton newspaper, "The Plain Speaker." Apparently the purpose of the attempt is the usual one, to acquire for C. I. O. the right to be the exclusive representative of the silk workers for collective bargaining with the employers.

Apparently out of 1,425 employees, 1,127 signed a petition, stating that "we are opposed to the methods and principles of C. I. O. and its affiliates, and do not want C. I. O. or its affiliates to represent us in any manner". This petition was printed in the newspapers last Saturday morning.

Thereupon a C. I. O. affiliate, the United Mine Workers of America, took action. The United Mine Workers are the most important affiliate of C. I. O. They are more than an affiliate of C. I. O., they are the heart of it. The United Mine Workers is the organization of which Mr. John L. Lewis has long been the head and from which Mr. Lewis launched his C. I. O.

The Hazleton branch of the United Mine Workers published a proclamation which they captioned: "Mine Workers Accept Challenge of Duplan Employees." One paragraph of the proclamation read—I quote only the materia parts:

"Let it be known by each and every signer of the petition in the paper this morning (that is, the petition of workers opposed to C. I. O.) that the United Mine Workers in this region will not permit faithful workers, independent organizations or communism to enter the portals of the city of Hazleton."

What is meant by inclusion of "communism" in this United Mine Workers proclamation I do not know. I imagine the word is inserted as part of a broad declaration of policy. Conceivably it may have been inserted to muddy the water. I do not know. So far as the published facts available to me show, communism does not figure in the situation in any way. The reader trying to understand what has happened in Hazleton can dismiss communism.

What the proclamation is directed against is "independent organizations" and "faithful employees." By "faithful employees" is meant the employees who do not wish to join C. I. O. and who signed a petition so stating. It is against these that the United Mine Workers declare war. Here is something new in America—the phrase "faithful employees" used as a term of odium, the same as "scab."

A further paragraph of the United Mine Workers' proclamation lays down a startling policy. It is absolutely explicit. It is free from any extraneous allusion. It is as plain as words can be. I put it in italics:

"Any member of the United Mine Workers who has a wife, daughter, sister, brother or son who is a signer of this petition should and will pay strict attention to this statement, for on it depends his membership in the United Mine Workers of America. This organization will not permit any of its members to hold membership who allows any member of his family to scab in an open shop such as the Duplan Silk Mill. Let every mine worker beware for he will not be allowed to enter any mine or colliery if he permits any member of his family to return to work in the Duplan Silk Mill unless signed by a legitimate labor organization. HUGH V. BROWN.
"District No. 7, United Mine Workers of America."

Let us summarize what this [illegible]:

No man can work in a mine unless he is a member of the United Mine Workers of America.

No man can be a member of the United Mine Workers unless he makes himself responsible for his "wife, daughter, sister, brother or son."

If any of these relatives undertake to work in an open shop or to work in any form of labor not organized by what C. I. O. regards as "a legitimate labor organization"—in that event the miner will not be allowed to work in any mine.

This policy, the requirement that every man shall be responsible for every member of his family, including his brothers, illustrates how far the present spirit of compulsion in America has gone toward a condition which it was supposed civilization had long outgrown.

Who Pays The National Debt?

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

Out of the welter of political news emanating from Washington during recent weeks has come a cheering statement.

It is that the administration has renewed its promise to work toward a balanced budget.

With a national debt hovering around the $37,000,000,000 mark—highest in our history—and a growing deficit, the American people will hope that that promise is fulfilled.

It means so much to them! Why?

Because, as all economists point out, public debt means merely postponed taxes, and taxes mean a slash out of every worker's income.

This is obviously true when the worker pays his taxes directly. And it is just as true when he pays them indirectly—for our so-called "painless taxes" hit both the man who produces the goods on which they are levied and the consumer who ultimately purchases them in the form of food, or clothes, or shelter, or the necessary tools and equipment of his vocation.

Moreover, as economists point out further, heavy debts and their ominous threat of increased taxes curtail production, and, with it, employment. And it is primarily to increased employment, with its spread of earnings among all citizens, that every producer, whether on the farm or in the many fields of business activity, must look for restoration of the purchasing power on which depends his livelihood.

For progress toward a balanced budget, dispatches point out, certain brakes on Federal spending are required. They include an effort on the part of the heads of the many departments, bureaus and commissions at Washington to keep within their budget estimates.

Those brakes should be applied. Certainly that is not too much to ask of our office-holders, when it influences so deeply the income and living standards of the American people.

Politicians create the Public Debt. But the workers—and their families—pay it.

Jail Operations Report Given by Bailey

Sheriff Joseph L. Bailey has issued the following report on operation of the Steuben County jail for the period July 1, 1936 to June 31, 1937:

Total admissions for year—men, 523, women, 24; average daily population, 41.8; cost per week per prisoner, $1.30; number days work performed, 6,300; average population for the year 3 more than last year.

Number days work performed shows an average of 21 men working six days a week for the year. This includes doing the laundry for County Home, Sanatorium and Court House; also ordinary farm work at County Home and Sanatorium, besides handling auto plates and doing extra work at Court House in Bath.

The cost per meal per prisoner is six cents. This is very low for substantial meals, in the face of rising prices of various food commodities purchased for the kitchen.

BLACK

When Mr. Roosevelt sent Hugo Black's name to the Senate to be an associate justice of the Supreme Court, he introduced a major political issue for the election next year.

Insiders at the Capital insist that the Alabaman was selected out of spite. These observers declare that the decision was hastily made, in an hour when the President was angered at southern Senators, for resisting certain New Deal "reform" policies.

In retaliation he announced an appointment which was personally objectionable to almost every Senator except a handful of extreme radicals. Yet, confirmation was certain because the Senate professed to be "the world's greatest club". Rejection of one of their own number was unthinkable.

The fact that certain Senators did object, thus causing the appointee to run the gauntlet of open denunciation by Copeland, Burke, Bridges, Steiwer, White and others, is sufficient to reflect the attitude of his colleagues.

"Appointments made in such a way are rarely wise appointments", says Raymond Moley former brain truster number one. "This one is no exception. It means that war is to continue within the Democratic party. Black looms only as a destroyer, an attacker, an inquisitor."

The appointment means that the court is now packed. The new justice is regarded throughout the nation as a "Roosevelt stooge" a New Deal "yes man".

No matter how radical a measure may be, or how nearly it resembles the governmental ideas of Europe, the Supreme Court's O. K. may be expected. The Frankfurter "hot dog boys", who write the wild-eyed measures for Congress to rubber stamp, now have a judicial majority on their side.

Black's sole experience on the bench consists of a year-and-a-half spent as a judge in the police court of Birmingham, Alabama. This was back in 1910-11. He is best known in the Senate as an investigator, an inquisitor.

In 1935 he defied public sentiment, constitutional rights and legal procedure, by seizing five million personal telegrams sent by private citizens and business concerns to Washington, D. C. It has been a New Deal bugaboo for many months, to threaten critics with a Black "investigation" of public smearing, as a means for silencing opposition. "Black the witch burner" is a familiar phrase around the Capital.

The selection of such a man to fill the position of Justice Van Devanter will have a decided effect upon the 1938 election campaign. When the voters go to the polls, to fill several Senate and House vacancies, they will likely remember that the President controls the Supreme Court.

They will also bear in mind that a passive or pusillanimous Congress would therefore make one-man rule a certainty.

Steuben Dairies Top State Disease Control

With a total of 196 herds under supervision Steuben leads all counties of New York State in the program of Bang's disease eradication, according to a recent statement by Professor C. G. Bradt of the Dairy Division, College of Agriculture.

Aaron Putnam, president of the farm bureau, points to the fact that Steuben county dairymen are repeating in the Bang's abortion program, what they did in T. B. eradication fifteen years ago.

Steuben was the first dairy county in the state to eradicate Bovine T. B. and Mr. Putnam predicts similar experience in the eradication of the Bang's abortion.

The situation, Mr. Putnam states, is due to the educational program which has been carried on by the farm bureau for many years, as a result of which local dairymen appreciate the advantage of disease control.

Lincoln's Bad Guess

Business recovery reflects its influences in increased numbers of marriages. At the same time the birth rate in the United States has again dropped into new lows. Abraham Lincoln guessed in 1862 that there would be a population of 251,680,914 in 1930. He based his guess on babies, and the total ten-year averages in national growth the first seventy years' history of the United States.

BRASS TACKS For POULTRY RAISERS
By BURTON P. THARP

Early Layers

Not so many years ago when a man stated that he had gotten eggs from his pullets when they were 20 weeks of age would have been regarded as a member of a "tall story" club or at best gravely mistaken. That sort of laying just wasn't done in a well behaved flock of young pullets.

Today pullets are expected to lay at 20 weeks of age. Especially is this true of Leghorns. One small flock owner who raised White Leghorns boasted a few days ago that his 17 weeks old pullets had laid the first egg. Furthermore he can produce the flock and at that time had the egg.

A flock of 50 Buff Orphington pullets which were being raised along with approximately the same number of cockerels received as many as a dozen eggs in one day when the birds were four and one-half months old. This is very unusual for Orphingtons and other heavy breeds. The Orphingtons were being raised in batteries, pullets and cockerels alike to be used for dressed poultry. No attempt was being made to force the pullets to lay. They had never been permitted to run in a poultry yard nor had they ever tasted green grass or sunned themselves.

Early eggs are desirable but many poultrymen contend that laying too early is weakening to the birds. Those who are producing eggs from pullets 20 weeks of age or less state that they have noticed no undesirable results from the practice and contend that if given the proper feed and care pullets can reach maturity quicker and lay at an early age because they are in excellent physical condition. The argument is set forth that so long as the pullets continue to receive proper feed and care no damage can result.

In the case of the White Leghorn flock which produced the first egg at 17 weeks the birds appear to be well developed and thrifty. They have the full, waxy, red combs of the flock going into production and are a fine flock in appearance. It would be difficult to believe that the birds were not older if it were not for the record of their purchase as day-old chicks.

Every man should place a large part of his savings in a variety of investments which guarantee the maximum of security. Only the spare dollars should be used for speculation—for ventures which, though they may return a great profit, may also result in 100 per cent loss of the principal employed. Before taking risks, it is essential to build a sound financial bulwark for the future.

Dr. K. L. Fernow has plots to show the injurious effects of plant diseases. Healthy tubers are contrasted with diseased ones. Professor G. F. MacLeod and Dr. W. A. Rawlings tell and show the most up-to-date means of warfare against insects, and new mixtures of poisonous dusts and sprays have been applied at various dates to show contrast.

In plant breeding, Professor Donald Reddick shows a group of first generation hybrid seedlings that are immune to blight because of characteristics they inherit from a wild Mexican potato plant. Dr. J. R. Livermore has a plot of new seedlings, mutations, and clean selections that show further results of potato breeding.

Dr. Ora Smith of the department of vegetable crops has a planting which shows the effects of storage temperatures and ways to cure and treat cut seed. Professor E. V. Hardenburg has arranged a plot to show all of the new potato varieties in comparison with those now grown widely in New York state.

How to dig potatoes and prevent bruising will be explained by Professor C. N. Turner, agricultural engineer. He says it is not so much the kind of digger used, as the way in which it is used, that prevents damage. He will use three types of diggers.

August is a good time to stage a community flower show because many garden flowers are in bloom.

Lawmakers Crawfish When it Comes to Taxing Themselves

Washington, Aug. 23—(Special)—W. Sterling Cole, representative in Congress from the 37th District, has discovered that while Congressmen pass all kinds of bills imposing taxes upon citizens they are a bit shy at passing any bill that imposes a special charge upon themselves. In an endeavor to assist the District of Columbia he prepared a bill that would have hit the pocketbooks of all members of Congress and they promptly rejected it without comment.

Mr. Cole is a member of the District of Columbia Committee, the group that practically rules that unique section of the United States, and in his official capacity was called upon to help solve the problem of a $7,000,000 deficit that must be met by new taxes upon residents or else be paid by the government out of general revenues. These annual deficits have run from $5,000,000 to $12,000,000 and the Bath lawyer sought the reason.

He discovered that despite the abnormally high Washington rents the taxation rate is but $1.50 per hundred; that the gasoline tax is but two cents; that there is a small personal property tax and the total represents all that residents have to pay. There are no franchise, income or estate inheritance taxes. Automobile licenses cost but $1. These are some of the reasons why the wealthy seek a residence in Washington and the main reason the annual deficit is so high.

Mr. Cole, after weeks of study of the taxation problem, proposed that District of Columbia residents be required to pay taxes comparable to those paid elsewhere throughout the United States and thus relieve the government of the high yearly deficit. The tax bill he aided in drafting increased all existing taxes and imposed several new ones, including an income tax that would have affected every member of Congress. The House majority simply couldn't see any bill taxing their incomes and the measure was killed. Consequently, despite Mr. Cole's work, the rest of the country will continue to pay the deficit of the District that its political and other residents may continue to enjoy the lowest taxes in the United States.

The condition of heifers when they come off pasture this fall makes a difference in the way they should be fed. If well grown, all the good quality hay and about three pounds of concentrates will generally be enough.

Big Increase in License Revocation

Albany, Aug. 23—Reckless driving, driving while intoxicated and leaving the scene of an accident, continue to lead the field in the long list of causes for revocation of operators' licenses, according to a report of the State Motor Vehicle Bureau, made public by Commissioner Charles A. Harnett.

During the first six months of this year, 1,931 persons had their operator's license revoked for convictions of driving while intoxicated. This figure compared with 1,432, the total for the corresponding months of last year, shows an increase of 499 revocations. Four hundred and forty-six motorists lost their license because of reckless driving; approximately double the figure for the first half of 1936. Revocations attributed to motorists leaving the scene of an accident rose from 244 of last year to 523 for the same months of this year.

Out of a total of 15,153 suspensions for the first half of 1937, 3,019 of these suspensions were due to accidents resulting in serious injuries to persons involved. For the same period of last year, 2,463 persons had their licenses suspended for this reason. Suspensions due to reckless driving increased from 638 during the first six months of last year to 1,917 for the same period of this year. Another 2,162 licenses were suspended, pending prosecution for drunken driving, while last year, 1,563 were suspended on the same charge.

A total of 18,836 revocations and suspensions for the first half of 1937 shows an increase of 5,251 over the corresponding months of 1936.

Seasons on Partridge and Muskrat Discussed at Albany Meet

Albany, Aug. 23—A hearing will be held at the State Office Bulding, this city, Tuesday, August 31, at 10 A. M. standard time, to determine whether there will be the usual open season, a restricted and reduced open season or a closed season on ruffed grouse or partridge and muskrats in New York State this year. Announcement to this effect was made today by Lithgow Osborne, Conservation Commissioner. Decision to conduct such a hearing was reached after hundreds of questionnaires on the subject had been returned by sportsmen's clubs throughout the state and after a petition to close the season on these two species of game had been received from a group of Albany sportsmen.

Field research investigations conducted by the Conservation Department over several years indicated that there will soon be a greatly reduced number of ruffed grouse as the result of the downward trend of the grouse cycle, and the critical points will be reached this fall and in 1938. This research work previously revealed that there are cycles of abundance and scarcity over ten-year periods with the partridge. In 1935 the take by hunters of this species was the hghest in many years and since then the birds have been seen in decreasing numbers, and the investigators show further that in the mountainous counties, where the decrease shows up first it is well under way. The preponderance of opinion, judged by the questionnaires received, seems to be for a closed season or one of one week's duration this year.

Likewise the opinion on the muskrats seems to be for a closed season or one of only a month. Last year, with the unusually open winter and resulting favorable trapping conditions the muskrat population was greatly reduced and the judgment of all officials of the Department is that drastic steps must be taken to protect the animal.

Shell peas just before cooking them, for they spoil faster after they are shelled, home economists say.

National Grange To Meet Nov. 10 In Harrisburg

When the National Grange meets at Harrisburg, Pa., November 10 to 18 for its 71st annual session, it will occupy at different times during the convention two of the most beautiful buildings in the eastern section of the country. One of these is the State Education building, erected at a cost of $5,000,000 and containing the Forum, whose decorations, state effects, lighting equipment and acoustic perfection are equalled by very few buildings in the world. The other is the Zembo Mosque, erected in 1930 at a cost of $1,000,000 as a Shriner's meeting place, but a completely equipped building for conventions, theatrical events, athletic contests, etc. Both buildings have ample seating capacity, and it is in the Zembo Mosque that the climax degree of Grange ritualism, the Seventh, will be conferred on Friday, November 12.

On that day the supreme degree will be given four times—once in the forenoon, twice in the afternoon and once in the evening, on an expected class of 10,000 candidates. Besides the initiates ample provision will be made for all Grange members to witness the degree who have received it at previous sessions. At Pittsburg, in 1923, the Seventh Degree class numbered 2,998, but thousands of Pennsylvania Patrons have become affiliated with the Order since then, while great delegations of initiates will come from adjjoining states.

The Chamber of Commerce and other civic organizations in Harrisburg are making elaborate plans for entertaining the big Grange convention, and all the facilities of the Capital City will be placed at the disposal of the Grange visitors. Side trips to Gettysburg, Valley Forge, Hershey and other points of interest will be arranged, with the possibility of a Grange service of some sort at Valley Forge. On Sunday, November 14, the Grange people will be guests of religious services in one of the largest Harrisburg churches.

Among the live questions which the Harrisburg session will discuss, and upon which positive Grange declarations will be made are these:

A workable system of crop insurance and definite steps to reduce farm tenancy; regaining the American market for the American farmer and insisting upon tariff equality for agriculture; opposition to the spread of corporation farming and encouragement of the family sized farm; research work to develop new industrial uses for agricultural products; extension of rural electrification to the farm homes; lower interest rates for farm mortgage, consistent with sound loaning policy; using a large part of motor revenues for the improvement of farm-to-market roads; a stringent truth-in-fabrics law for the protection of consumers.

Public interest in what Grange policies the Harrisburg session may adopt is increased by the fact that from the very announcement of the plan to pack the Supreme Court, the Grange took a vigorous stand in opposition, and its voice was emphatically heard at Washington, heartily supported by nearly the entire farm people of the nation. The defeat of the Supreme Court project proves anew that the Grange is the spokesman of the farmers of America, which makes the coming Harrisburg session of the National Grange the outstanding agricultural gathering of the entire year.

An Arkansas boy who ran away from the farm to travel with a circus several years ago is now worth $200,000. But lest this be construed as a suggestion that other boys do likewise, it may be explained that the farm, left to the boy by his father, is now a part of the famous Smackover oil field.

Electricity Will Be Taught In Alfred by State

In accordance with the recently announced expansion of the state program of industrial education, plans have been announced for the opening of an intensive two-year course in Technical Electricity at the Alfred State School of Agriculture this fall. This will be followed by at least one additional course to be announced in the early winter with similar courses to be added from time to time as physical facilities permit.

The work in electricity will be designed primarily for employment in three distinct fields. Briefly these are equipment construction with manufacturers of the various types of electrical machinery, public utility construction and maintenance; and, household appliance erection and service including radio, heating, refrigeration and air conditioning.

The student's time will be divided equally between theory and actual practice. Four hours daily will be spent in the laboratory or shop and four hours in related technical work including pure and applied drafting, electrical science, physics, public speaking and business training. The courses of study follow:

First Year
Electricity—Laboratory and theory
Electrical construction shop
Electrical drafting
Trade mathematics
Physics
Economics
Public speaking

Second Year
Electricity — Advanced laboratory and theory
Electrical appliance shop
Mathematics (construction and estimating)
Business training.

The full instructional staff of engineers and construction specialists will start work on September first, although new students will not report until November first.

This will provide adequate time for purchase and installation of all necessary equipment to provide for fullest efficiency in the shop and laboratory work.

Tuition will be free to residents of New York. Out-of-state students will pay a tuition fee of twenty-five dollars per year. Since enrollment the first year will be limited to sixty students, based on order of application, it is expected that a considerable number will be turned away, but as the work progresses additional staff will be provided in future years.

Students who are interested should get in touch with the director of the school at Alfred, or with the Vocational Division of the Department of Education at Albany.

Fair to Feature Farm Implements 100 Years Old

Hidden away somewhere about the place or even treasured with family pride of historic possession may be some old farm implement that was in use in farming one hundred years ago.

The feature of the Chemung County Fair Farm Bureau Exhibit this year will be a most interesting collection of such odds and ends of tools and early period contraptions that were the farmer's essential aid in the years gone by, before the introduction of mechanized machinery that put them in the discard. It is to the period before the Civil War that the Farm Bureau is directing its search and already has contrived to gather together quite a collection of odd and amazing ancient aids to agriculture. It is for this reason that L. H. Woodward, County Agricultural Agent is broadcasting a request to all residents of Chemung County who may be interested in farming, to immediately institute a search for such old relics of Civil War times and communicate with him.

Up to date, the Bureau has obtained on loan for its exhibit retted flax, flax hackled, a lye barrel, tin candle lantern, cobblers' tools, tools and a buck saw that have been in continuous service for over 100 years and are on the trail of many others. They would particularly like to get in touch with the owners of old ox yokes, cradles, sickels, sugar-making equipment, butter and cheese-making equipment and other antiques of the farm, which are in good condition.

The Junior Farm Bureau Exhibit at the Chemung County Fair, will feature Cornell 11-corn, one of the new and improved varieties grown in Chemung County, and one that is recommended by the Farm Bureau for grain. Many Junior Farmers have had splendid success in growing this variety during the past two or three years.

Woodhull Trims Jasper Aces

A real ball game was seen by the fans at Woodhull last Sunday when Jasper faced Woodhull. Ike Clark struck out half of the men who faced him and allowed only four hits. Sarsfield, a newly acquired pitcher for the Jasper Aces, was in good form allowing the hard hitting Cardinals only 8 safeties.

The Rambler

Another great source of annoyance to many people of this community seems to be the smoke from the Erie Railroad. Somehow it seems to me that I heard of a ruling that they are not supposed to coal up when in the community. Corning people took some action and secured an improvement in the smoke abatement problem.

—o—

Cranberry Lake has been classed as a place where bass just could not be caught. And like many "can't" statements it has been proved wrong by someone who tried. Don Cook went after bass there and came away with a four-pound big mouthed bass. In addition I hear that George Bennett has caught several there. And all this happened Saturday and Sunday.

—o—

The statement "talk is cheap" is often heard. However, the woman in Akron, Ohio who talked to her sister in South Africa via radio must find it expensive. They have been separated for years, yet spend an hour a week in conversation via short wave amateur sets erected by mutual friends.

—o—

Gee, I have some great neighbors and friends in this village and do appreciate them a lot. Recently the Mrs. was slightly ill and a friend sent salad. When I spoke about the water, two others nearby offered the use of their wells for water.

—o—

Sometimes I may seem to be complaining too much or speaking out of turn here, but it is not meant to offend anyone individually for when I complain it is not a personal one of mine but is brought about by hearing of situations which should be remedied.

—o—

I wonder who the father is that leaves a son in front of one of the local drinkeries every day for several hours.

—o—

This village had three births in one night here recently. I understand fate shuffled the deck against the wishes of the parents involved in two cases for I understand one couple who got a girl wanted a son and one couple who received a son wanted a daughter.

—o—

"Calling all cars! Calling all cars! Such was the cry of three young misses aged, about 12, who were playing in front street last week and one of them was acting as police dispatcher and telling two other mounted officers, on kiddie cars, where crimes were being committed and what type of criminal to look for. I particularly remember the chief telling about a baby kidnaping.

—o—

It's the heat! Last week's heat plus high humidity played havoc with my ambition, and I guess that of many others.

—o—

Read a bit of philosophy recently about "never expect to find the perfect job". However, there are many in Addison and vicinity who seem happy in their work and would object strenuously if someone told them their job was not perfect.

—o—

Imagine Herr Hitler charging the German Government for the services of 600 picked men to watch over him at all times.

—o—

Gloucester fishing boats, the quaintness of Provincetown and Cape Cod, the Boston historic spots and the navy yard, New England and its forests and hills were all seen in the recent motor trip taken by Prof. and Mrs. Gladstone and family. It's a good idea for teachers to travel and see some of the things they read about to transmit to youngsters.

—o—

The Rambler was asked to go with a prospective auto driver to get a driving license. The prospective driver passed everything OK, but the Rambler took the calling down. The Brownie asked me for my driving license and after looking at it said, "It is people like you that make it easy for officers to make arrests on the highway". He then told me, after questioning, that I had failed to notify the Motor Bureau that I had moved last November. He said notice must be given within 10 days, after a person moves.

—o—

Incidentally I have met more courteous Brownies around the state.

—o—

The Addison Guest House had one late sleeper Tuesday morning. A large brown cat had climbed to the roof of the house and was sleeping comfortably and late on the sun-heated tin of the roof.

—o—

The Rambler calls attention to the infantile paralysis which is prevalent in several nearby communities and warns parents to see that all children receive instant medical care for any irregular throat or stomach disorders in order to prevent the disease here.

—o—

We had two fresh air children at our house, two girls eight and ten years of age. And you know the Mrs. and I were quite surprised to learn how far behind us are our own eight and ten year days. And after this experience I don't blame people for wanting children.

—o—

That's all.

How, What and Why

This paper has arranged with the Office of Information of the New York State Colleges of Agriculture and Home Economics to answer questions about problems of farm and home. If you enclose a self-eddressed, stamped envelope, and mention the name of this paper, you will receive a direct reply to your query from the colleges. Do not ask more than one question in one letter or on one post card. Ask as many questions as you like, but make each one a separate communication.

Burn Weeds?

B. B. S., asks: "Is there any use in burning weeds that have gone to seed?"

A. J. Pratt of the department of vegetable crops answers: "There is little use in burning weeds that have gone to seed.

"By the time the weeds are dry enough to burn, the seeds have mostly fallen to the ground and are not killed by the fire, which, however, does destroy the humus in the leaves and stems of the weeds.

"A crop of weeds that has gone to seed may be mowed and removed to a compost pile to decay. The ground may then be harrowed to start germination of many seeds of weeds so they will be killed by further harrowings or by winter; or the weeds may be disced down and the tops allowed to decay on the field where the seeds start to germinate."

What Kind of Lights?

P. L., asks: "What kind of light is satisfactory to use in the poultry house to produce more eggs at this season?"

Professor L. M. Hurd of the poultry department replies: "'Any source of light is satisfactory. Electricity, natural or artificial gas and kerosene or gasoline lanterns have been used, but electricity is the ideal kind of light since it requires little labor, the fire hazard is reduced, and it is easily controlled by automatic switches.

"If electricity is used, the lamps should be six feet from the floor and have reflectors sixteen inches in diameter, conical in shape, and four inches high. Arrangement of lamps will depend largely on the system of feeding".

This Week In Sports

Last week we went all haywire on our opening baseball story due to carelessness in thinking of our baseball terminology. No one kidded us directly, but I heard plenty about it. To get the record straight I'll check copy more closely hereafter.

—o—

Tommy Farr, an unknown miner from Wales, will attempt to put Joe Louis asleep Thursday night in a 15-round boxing bout in Madison Square Garden for the benefit of the New York Milk Fund. Incidentally the fund receives 10 per cent of the gross, while the fighters receive 40 per cent for Louis and 20 per cent for Farr and the rest for the management and taxes.

It is interesting to note that Farr jumped from obscurity in the past six months, and Joe Louis did likewise a few months back. Anyway if it only lasts three rounds it will draw a gate of $400,000 and prove something to somebody, or maybe it won't.

—o—

There is a great time anyway in New York this week for the Giants and Cubs are battling for top honors and the outcome of the games may decide whether the Terrymen will be the National League pennant contenders. It seems from box scores that the Giants have secured a new lease on life and are going places over a weakening Cub team, the week-end defeat of the Giants by the Phillies notwithstanding.

—o—

Many of the readers of this paper have seen Greyhound the famous trotter at the State Fair and will be interested to know he is being pitted against the best in Italy for a purse of $30,000, the race to be run in two heats, the first in the mid-west and the second in Italy in December. He has been the outstanding trotter this year.

—o—

The Endeavor II made her last bid for the international honors last week when she tried to race the ranger into port in an informal race and was left plowing the whitecaps in the Ranger's wake. In fact she was ten minutes behind.

—o—

Smaller colleges and high schools will get a break if the new six-man team football games ever get under way. The idea, as most forward sports movements do, originated in the west and is gradually traveling east. The game makes for more open field work, better views for the observer and plenty of action.

—o—

Elmira's margin in the NYP league seems to be fairly safe for the coming week unless an accident happens to the whole squad. The team has many ardent boosters in this vicinity who are hoping the boys will remain on top until the end of the season.

—o—

One of the well known national amateur golfers was asked about playing in the national open and stated that he would rather play against top-notchers who were well known than unknowns for the reason that the unknowns in an attempt to make a name for themselves will take chances that top-notchers would not dare take, and often make good on them to become a top-notcher and formidable opponent.

—o—

The collegiate all-star football team, composed of some of the outstanding players of college elevens last season will again attempt to show the superiority of amateur over professional football when they oppose the Giants in New York next month. I'll stick with the pros in these games.

FRUIT, FLOWERS AND GARDEN

Time for the Iris

A. M. S. Pridham

The bearded iris is mainly a garden flower, and it has few rivals in wealth of color. The iris is often called the poor man's orchid, but rich and poor alike are fond of its showy blossoms.

The best time to plant iris is during the summer immediately after the flowering period. Plants set at this time or as late as September will become well established before winter.

Plants set in the late fall are likely to heave during the winter. Spring planting does away with this possibility, but there is less chance of the plant flowering during the first season than when they are set during the summer. Iris can not be relied upon to flower abundantly until the second or third season after planting.

Bearded iris will thrive in a wide variety of soils but will do best in a medium-heavy loam. Soil fertility, too, is important, and may be improved by adding organic matter well in advance of actual planting. Plant the iris in a sunny place for best results. Plantings on the north side of the house or in other equally shaded places seldom thrive.

Plan Pay-off On Conservation Program

Final plans were drafted for the completion of Agricultural Conservation Program of 1937 in a meeting of the Conservation supervisors held in the farm bureau office Tuesday of this week.

The work of checking the 2100 farms enrolled and of making out the applications for payment will begin immediately, according to William Stempfle, county executive officer.

In preparation for the inspection each co-operator should have on hand the invoices or statements for all lime, fertilizer, grass, clover and alfalfa seed purchased and used on the farm this year.

If any practices have been made on rented land, the co-operator should have a written statement of the agreement between the owner and renter as to the disposition of the Conservation money.

The farm bureau office is to be notified when the co-operator has completed the program, has in his possession the required papers, and when he is ready for inspection.

Community or neighborhood flower shows are popular at this time of year, and Cornell bulletin E-316 has helpful hints on staging them. Single copies may be had free from the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca, N. Y.

Chicken, Chicken Who's Got the Rooster?

Mrs. N. B. Phelps is said to be getting a little skeptical about the affect upon her husband of the well now being drilled in their woodlot. It seems that a few days ago Mrs. Phelps wished to serve some friends with a fried broiler dinner and asked "Brady" to kill her a couple of young roosters. "Brady" brought in the dead fowls and Mrs. Phelps proceeded to get them ready, only to find that her spouse had killed two roosters and one pullet.

"Brady" has been staying up to the well a great deal of the time since then. And Mrs. Phelps is wondering since starting a well has deprived her husband of two-thirds of his extensive knowledge of chickens, just what he will remember about the business if a gusher blows in behind the house.

3. A reasonable short term until repayment for commercial loans; adequate security in the case of collateral or real estate loans.

4. Reasonable proof of dependable means for repaying the loan when due, or a definite schedule for repayment.

This bank has many good loans on its books. We are making new ones constantly. In every loan our first consideration is to safeguard the deposits entrusted to our care.

Wheeler, Woolsey at Avon Thurs. and Fri.

The tombs of long-dead Pharaohs in Egypt's famous "Valley of the Kings" have served before as settings for dramatic screen offerings.

But the use of these ancient spots as the setting of a modern feature-length comedy is something new under the film sun.

The hair-raising and hilarious climax of "Mummy's Boys" the latest RKO Radio offering starring Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey, takes place within the heiroglyphed walls and masonry of such a structure, reproduced in full size on a studio sound stage.

Mummies and mummy-cases, chariots, weapons, ornaments and all the other contents of such tombs were also copied in faithful detail for these scenes, which will afford most picture-goers their first opportunity to see what the interior of a tomb is really like.

While Chephren and other Pharaohs were buried inside the huge pyramids they erected during their lifetime, most of Egypt's ancient kings were entombed in the rocky walls of the shallow depression near by, known as the "Valley of the Kings", according to Captain Arthur Roberts , technical advisor on the picture. Most of these tombs were unknown until recent years, their entrances being covered by rocks and sand. And with the Egyptian government now taking complete charge of all further excavations, few visitors are allowed to penetrate their tunnelled depths.

Barbara Pepper, Moroni Olsen, Frank M. Thomas and Willie Best head the supporting cast. Lee Marcus produced, with Fred Guiol directing.

St. Catherine's Old Home Day Aug. 29

The Advertiser erred last week in announcing St. Catherine's Old Home Day celebration and dinner as September 25. It is to be held Sunday, August 29. The dates were confused owing to the radio contest closing September 25.

The ladies of the church will prepare a special dinner to be served in the church parlors August 29 after a field Mass service in the cemetery in remembrance of the dead of the parish. The field Mass is an annual custom associated with the Old Home Day celebration. Plans are being made for a large attendance of former Addisonites on this occasion.

Well Casing Unloaders Narrowly Avert Mishap

Men unloading the heavy casing used in the gas wells in Addison and Woodhull and vicinity have some narrow escapes in handling this eight-inch extra heavy pipe. Wednesday noon a group of them were unloading a flat car of pipe and placing it on tractor-trailer outfit when the apparatus became unruly and a large section of the pipe crashed on a truck and narrowly missed two of the workers. Had it struck a little harder it would have demolished the truck and severely injured the men.

Report of First Town Meeting In Addison

Pamphlets relating to the history of the various communities in Steuben County were printed in 1879 and copies distributed about the county at a nominal charge. Many of these have disappeared and but few copies are in existence. One is in the possession of a Troupsburg woman, Mrs. Griggs, and with the aid of Francis Edwards, who discovered the pamphlets, we are permitted to print part of one relating to Addison.

"In the earliest record entitled "Votes and proceedings of a town meeting held in and for the Town of Middletown (now Addison) the first Tuesday in April, 1797 we find that Reuben Searles was elected supervisor; Oliver Miller, town clerk; George Goodhue, John Wyman and John Martin, assessors; Lemuel Searles, constable; Jonathan Tracy and Asabel Stiles poormasters; John Martin, George Goodhue and Stephen Dolson, commissioners of highways; Lemuel Searles, collector; Abel White, Jonathan Tracy and Oliver Miller, commissioners of schools; Reuben Searles, Jr., and James Benham, pathmasters; Elisha Gilbert and Silas Morey, fence viewers; Repben Searles, poundkeeper.

Voted: That a lawful fence be four and one-half feet high and about five inches between rails.

"Voted: That the Reuben Searles barn yard to be a town pound.

"Voted: That a ferry be kept near where the road crosses the river, and that threepence be charged for a man to cross.

"Voted: That the next town meeting be held at the school house in said town for the year ensuing."

"The pamphlet commentator does not state at what house this meeting was held but it was probably at the school house as Timothy Searles was appointed to take care of that building and Reuben Searles to be fireman. This speaks well for the civilization of the pioneers of Addison. They probably built the first school house in the county of Steuben if not it certainly was one of the first for it must have been erected as early as 1796 and at that period there were few if any school houses in the county".

Mr. and Mrs. James Mullaney of this village and son, James of Chicago, were in Galeton visiting Thomas Madigan, brother of Mrs. Mullaney.

State Makes Office of Commissioner Of Public Welfare "Big Business"

Bath, Aug. 24.—From the establishment of the Steuben County Home until 1928 the man in charge, known as "superintendent of the poor", had to qualify as a farmer to meet the demands of the office as his work involved the operation of a substantial farm to supply the needs of the home inmates. With the depression, however, came a radical change in the work as well as in the title of the office, for the present Commissioner of Public Welfare has become the director of the biggest business in the county with the operation of the county farm but a minor part of the work placed upon the office by law.

Some idea of the difference made by the depression may be gained from the fact that in 1928 expenditures at the County Home were $44,942.21 with $49,581.05 the total appropriation handled by the office. Since then the County Home expense has decreased while mandatory legislation has increased the expense of the office amazingly. In 1930 County Home expenditures were $41,062.03, a decrease of more than $8,000, while the total appropriation had increased to $57,444.83.

In 1931 the County Home cost was 36,936.59, a marked decrease effected by Commissioner E. Ray Hardenbrook, while the total appropriation was $185,324.54, a decided increase due to new laws affecting old age security, children in foster homes, etc. In 1932 the Legislature passed the Wicks Act and while the County Home cost decreased to $31,632.66, the total appropriation jumped to $251,811.56. In 1933 County Home cost again decreased to $28,943.28 while mandatory legislation boosted the total appropriation to $261,424.49.

In 1934, with the TERA, Work Relief, Civil Works Administration, etc., the Home cost was $31,914.52 and the total appropriation $239,-708.77. The flood of 1935 had its effect upon expenditures with the Home cost $30,376.95 and the total expenditures $290,407.69. In 1936 the Home cost was $26,650.83 and the total appropriation $278,031.94. In 1928 one clerk kept all office records while in 1936 one clerk, 10 office workers and 9 investigators were required. Legislative acts have made this office "big business".

BERRY PEDDLERS ARE WARNED ABOUT BASKETS

Berry peddlers are warned that selling berries in boxes which have been used before is a violation of the state law and also brings the user under the jurisdiction of the county sealer of weights and measures. This community, in common with many others, has many people who pick the berries and try to earn a little extra money for themselves. However, the decayed fruit and unclean conditions of the boxes makes them a source of disease to future users, hence the law prohibits their use.

When pastures become so scant during the summer that heifers cannot get enough feed to keep them growing, additional feed is advisable.
